Readme:

To run the program the user should first run the server.sh in one terminal. Then they may run the client.sh with one parameter (i.e. their name) in a second terminal. Failure to put in a parameter will result in the client.sh not running.

The scripts will setup their own pipes within the root directory they are stored in. Similarly, any directories and files will all be created within the directory the scripts are contained.